Twang is a vocal technique that is quite nasal. You can use this technique to achieve a crisp, yet, powerful breathless head voice. You use this technique when you move from head voice to chest voice. One example is the vocal fry. Vocal fry is a low and creaky vibration that occurs when you flutter your vocal cords. This is known as “ husky voice. ”

All students start off by learning traditional classical vocal techniques to help them establish a foundation for healthy phonation. Once they have established a stable foundation, if they so wish, I teach them how to take their classical base and add in contemporary vocal technique (Rock, Jazz, Pop, Metal) such as twang, falsetto, the mix voice, vocal distortion, vocal rattle, fry screaming and false fold screaming.
